

Adults Can Go to College, Too

Would you like to change careers? Would you like to earn your GED and continue your education? Do you need financial aid to go back to college?

It isn't too late to go to college. Even if you've never been to college before or you are working to support a family, there are educational options and financial aid available just for you.

Start by contacting the admissions officer at a college that interests you. You can also look at CFNC.org to find colleges that have special programs for adult learners.

CFNC can direct you to resources to complete high school, begin as a college freshman, return to school as a transfer student, get a new degree or explore new career options. CFNC can also help you find financial aid, including federal and state scholarships and grants and veteran's benefits.

Don't let your age or life circumstances keep you from reaching your educational goals. CFNC can help.
